

Mickey Mouse says HELLO!

Hello, girls and boys. Snow White has taken the Seven Dwarfs for a long walk in the woods and they have decided to wash in the little waterfall they have found.

Happy decided that he would rather have a bath than just wash. As for Sleepy, he had his eyes closed while he was washing and so he got his beard a little too wet. Sneezy has some water in his ears, but Dopey is so proud of his clean hands. Only Grumpy doesn't seem too pleased, but when Grumpy doesn't seem pleased it really means that he is happy!

Now it is riddle time. What is the difference between someone who is late for a train and a teacher in a girls' school? One misses the train, and the other trains the misses.

Oh, I nearly forgot! In the picture our artist has hidden three hats, two shoes and a belt. Look carefully and you'll find them.

See you all in the next issue!

Your friend,

Mickey Mouse

ALL-NEW STORIES WITH FAVORITE WALT DISNEY CHARACTERS

Disneyland

Magazine... for Young Readers

ONLY
35¢

EVERY OTHER TUESDAY NO. 97

A FAWCETT PUBLICATION

06595

1. One evening, after the circus performance, Dumbo and his little friend, Timothy Mouse, saw lots of bright lights in the sky. "Look, fireworks!" squeaked Timothy, excitedly. "Let's go and watch!" So the two chums hurried towards the palace meadow, and from there they had a super view of the display.

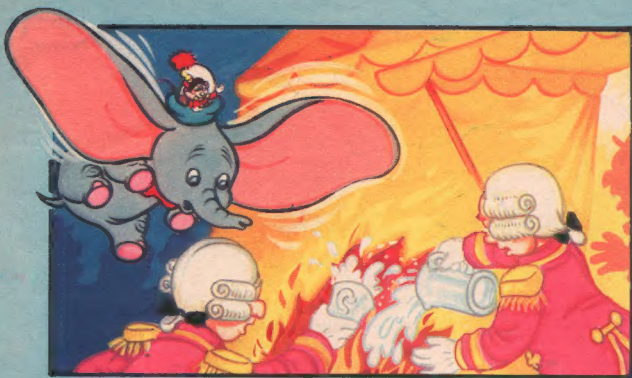

2. "They're letting off the fireworks in the grounds of the royal palace," said Timothy. "Yes, so they are," agreed Dumbo. "I heard in the town today that it's the Grand Duke's birthday. They must be part of his birthday party." "Look!" cried Timothy, "that rocket has gone off course. It's coming this way!"

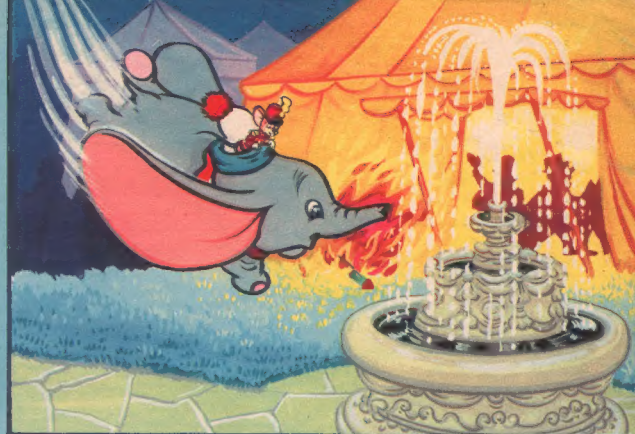

3. Up at the royal palace there was great alarm when the rocket zipped the wrong way. It landed so close to the big tent in the meadow, that it set fire to the canvas! And a grand meal was to be served in the tent after the fireworks display.

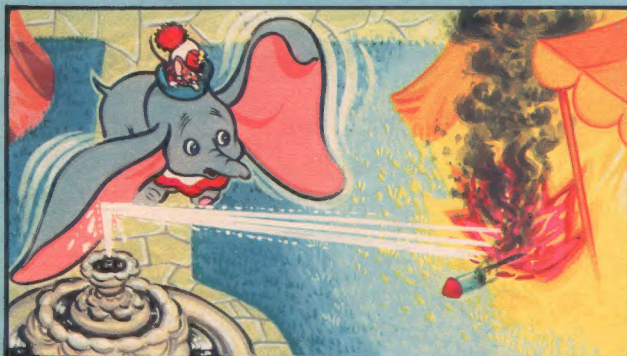

4. Even from where Dumbo and Timothy Mouse were standing it was clear what had happened. "Oh, dear, that runaway rocket has set fire to the big tent," squeaked Timothy. "We had better go and see if we can help put the fire out," said Dumbo.

5. Timothy climbed on to Dumbo's hat and, with a flip-flap-flop of his big ears, the clever little circus elephant took off and flew across the meadow. As they got closer, they saw the servants trying to put out the flames, but, as fast as they tried to put them out, the flames spread. Then little Dumbo had an idea! He had spotted a fountain nearby.

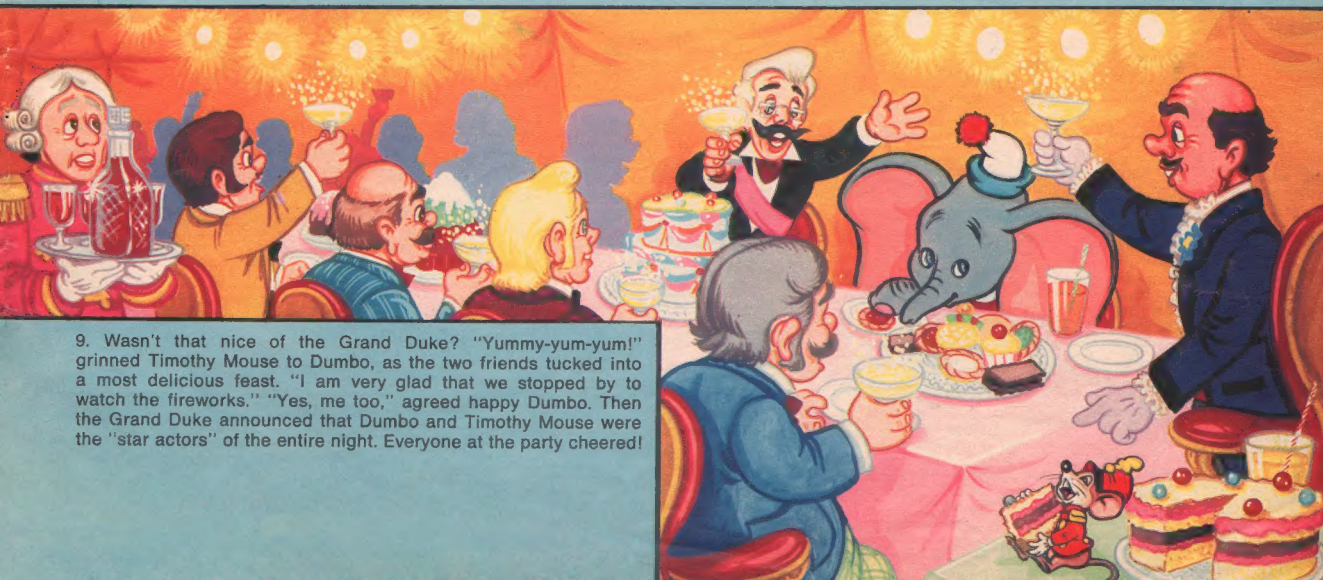

6. There wasn't a lot of water round the bottom of the fountain, or our clever flying elephant might have used his trunk as a fire-hose. Instead, he flew to the fountain, then banked steeply. "We'll soon have that fire out," Dumbo told little Timothy Mouse.

7. Leaning right over to one side, Dumbo then flew over the top of the fountain, spreading one of his big ears over the spouting jet of water. SWOOSH! SPLASH! As the water struck Dumbo's big ear it was forced round and out to one side . . . right towards the spot where the big tent was on fire!

8. SWISH-SWISH, FIZZLE-SPTSS! That is how the flames sounded as the jet of water hit them, and in two seconds the fire was out. "Well done, Dumbo!" cheered the Grand Duke. "You have saved our tent from being burned down! You must come and join our party . . . and bring your friend!"

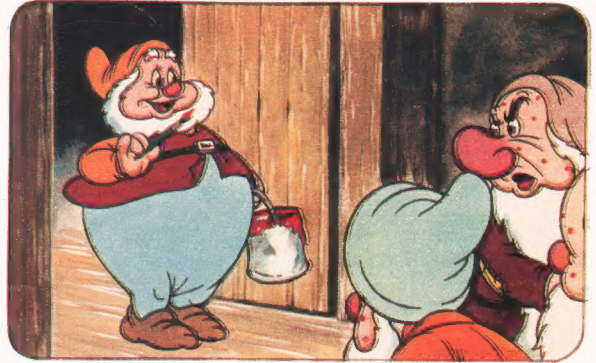

9. Wasn't that nice of the Grand Duke? "Yummy-yum-yum!" grinned Timothy Mouse to Dumbo, as the two friends tucked into a most delicious feast. "I am very glad that we stopped by to watch the fireworks." "Yes, me too," agreed happy Dumbo. Then the Grand Duke announced that Dumbo and Timothy Mouse were the "star actors" of the entire night. Everyone at the party cheered!

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs

1. One morning, when Doc, Grumpy, Sleepy, Sneezy, Bashful and Dopey awoke they found they had red spots all over their faces. "Oh, dear!" said Doc. "I rather think we all have spottytitis! It's very catching, and we shall have to stay in bed until we are better."

2. Then the six dwarfs heard someone chuckling in the doorway. There stood Happy, holding a tin of red paint in one hand and a paint-brush in the other. "I painted those red spots on your faces while you were all asleep," he laughed. "Ha, ha! Isn't it a funny joke?"

3. Happy was often playing jokes on the other dwarfs and they didn't always find Happy's jokes very funny. "We'll teach Happy a lesson by playing a joke on him," they said, and they made a mixture of flour and feathers.

4. They waited until Happy was outside the cottage and then they balanced the mixture on the top of the door. "When Happy comes in the bucket will fall and the flour and feathers will go all over him," laughed Doc.

5. Happy didn't know that the other dwarfs were planning to play a joke on him, but he saw that the cottage door was open. "Dear, dear," he said. "All the cold air will go into the cottage and make it cold for Snow White. I'd better close it." And Happy took hold of the handle.

6. When Happy closed the door from the outside the bucket fell off the top of the door and the flour and feathers fell all over the six dwarfs inside the house. "Glug! Help!" cried Doc. "The flour and feathers were supposed to go over Happy, not over us!"

7. "Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Happy when he saw the six dwarfs. "You do look funny!" The dwarfs did look funny, but they didn't feel very funny. But even Snow White had to laugh when she came into the room and saw them.

8. Have you ever noticed that laughter is catching? Suddenly everyone was laughing. "Aren't we lucky to have someone like Happy, who is always jolly and full of fun!" Snow White smiled as they all tidied the house.

HAVE YOU MISSED AN ISSUE OF DISNEYLAND MAGAZINE?

If you did, and you want to keep your DISNEYLAND MAGAZINE collection up to date, you can order back issues by simply filling out this handy order form for uninterrupted fun and continued adventures with the fabulous Disney characters!

DISNEYLAND MAGAZINE
AN ALL-COLOR
BIWEEKLY MAGAZINE FOR BEGINNING READERS!

20 PAGES OF FUN, GAMES, RIDDLES AND STORIES!

TO ORDER, WRITE:
FAWCETT PUBLICATIONS, INC.
1 Fawcett Place, Greenwich, Ct 06830

Please send me back issues of
DISNEYLAND MAGAZINE
NUMBER _____

Enclosed please find 35¢ in coins, checks or money order (No stamps)
for each issue ordered, plus 10¢ for postage for one or more copies.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____ Please Print

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP CODE _____

MICKEY MOUSE! • DONALD DUCK! • PLUTO! • GOOFY! • SNOW WHITE! • CINDERELLA!
DUMBO! • PINOCCHIO! • PETER PAN!

LITTLE HIAWATHA

1. One day, the sky was blue, the clouds were fleecy white and the sun was shining and Little Hiawatha said to himself: "I think I will get into my canoe and go for a paddle on the river." "Take care now," warned Bobtail, Hiawatha's pet rabbit. "Tip-taps the woodpecker told me he saw Slink the wolf prowling through the woods this morning."

2. Now, Slink the wolf isn't a very nice fellow at all. For one thing, he's very greedy and for another he's always looking for something tasty to eat. "I'll be careful, Bobtail," smiled Little Hiawatha, as he climbed into his canoe. "I'm not going very far and anyway, I'll be safe in my canoe. Goodbye, I'll be back soon."

3. "Hello there, Little Hiawatha," called out Swoop the kingfisher. "Take care now. Old Slink the wolf is on the prowl." "Thank you, Swoop," replied Little Hiawatha. "I'll keep my eyes wide open." But even though he kept his eyes wide open, he didn't see Slink.

4. The reason why Little Hiawatha didn't see Slink the wolf was because that naughty, cunning sneery-leery fellow was lurking behind a big tree at the side of the river. He was already licking his greedy lips and big sharp teeth as he peeped out at Little Hiawatha, paddling towards him. "Ha-ha! Here comes my dinner for today," he chuckled, as he waited for Little Hiawatha to draw level with him.

5. "Too-ra-loo-ra-loola, Too-ra-loo-ra-lay, Paddling down the river, What a happy day!" Little Hiawatha was singing when SUDDENLY, from behind the big tree, sprang Slink the wolf. "GOT YOU," he shouted. "I've been waiting a long time for you, Little Hiawatha!" Little Hiawatha gasped and stopped singing.

6. SPLONK! Right into Little Hiawatha's canoe jumped Slink of the huge teeth and wide open mouth. But cunning though Slink is, he is not very clever. You see, he forgot that he is a great big wolf and Little Hiawatha is a very little boy. So Slink's end of the canoe went down and Little Hiawatha's end of the canoe went up in the air.

7. "Help! Save me!" Then: "GURGLE-gurgle-GLUG!" spluttered Slink the wolf as down, down, down into the cold wet river he sank. And "WHEE! What fun! I like this!" laughed Little Hiawatha gleefully as he shot through the air. "I bet you're the very first Red Indian to fly!" chuckled Swoop the kingfisher, who flew past again just then.

8. PLOP! On to a soft and grassy bank at the side of the river landed Little Hiawatha. And Slink the wolf? Well, struggling and sneezing, and shivering and grumbling and snorting, he pulled himself out of the river on to the other bank and went back to his den. Lucky Little Hiawatha! He ran all the way home to tell his Mummy and Daddy all about how Slink had missed having him for dinner.

Donald Duck

in NATURE STUDY

"Mmmmm!"
 "Mmmmm!"
 "Mmmmm!"

Those three sounds were sighs of happy contentment and they came from Donald Duck's three little nephews, Louie, Huey and Dewey.

The boys were happy and contented because they had a whole afternoon and nothing to do with it except sit in Donald Duck's comfortable armchairs and read their comics.

But not for long!

Suddenly Donald Duck came into the room.

"Boys of your age shouldn't be sitting indoors on a lovely day like this," he said. "You should be doing something."

"But we are doing something, Unca Donald," answered Louie. "We're reading our comics."

Donald Duck frowned, and Donald is very good at frowning.

"I mean, you should be doing something in the open air," he told them. "This way. Come with me."

The three boys knew that it would be useless to try to argue with Donald, so up they got from their comfortable chairs and followed Donald out of the house.

"Where are we going, Unca Donald?" asked Huey, as Donald led the three boys along the road.

"We're going into the woods and we're going to do some Nature Study," Donald informed him.

The woods were rather dark and damp, and the boys kept thinking about the comfortable chairs back home. Donald was the only one who was enjoying himself.

"What do you know about insects?" he asked.

"Er—not very much, Unca Donald," confessed Dewey.

"Well, I'm going to teach you all about them and other small creatures," smiled Donald.

He looked carefully around and then said: "Ah, I spy something! Now, see if you can guess what it is. It has eight legs, and it spins webs."

The boys all knew that Donald was talking about a spider. But they also knew that Donald wouldn't be very pleased if he couldn't feel that he knew more than they did.

"What is it, Unca Donald?" they asked.

"A spider, of course," chuckled Donald.

Presently Donald stopped again.

"Here's something else," he said. "It has six legs and it is a very busy little insect. Can you guess what it is?"

"No," answered the boys.

"It's an ant," Donald told them.

Donald kept asking the boys questions about insects and other tiny creatures and the boys became more and more fed-up.

By this time Donald was feeling that he knew all there was to know about insects and at last he said: "Now, are there any questions about insects which you would like to ask me?"

"Yes, Unca Donald," said Huey. "I have a question. What insect is it that has six legs, yellow stripes and pink and blue spots and wings?"

"I don't know," said Donald. "What is it?"

"I don't know either, Unca Donald," answered Huey, "but there's one on the back of your neck!"

"Ow!" cried Donald, flapping at his neck, and he ran off, chased by the flying insect. "I think we'd better go home!" he said, managing to get rid of it at last.

And, of course, the boys didn't mind in the least!

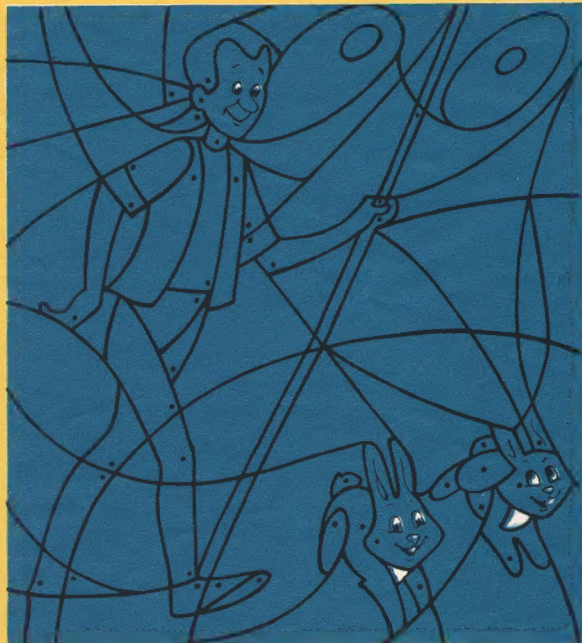

FUN-TIME for Everyone!

One day, Little Hiawatha met an animal who was not very friendly at all. Luckily he was able to frighten him off with one of his sucker arrows. To see who the animal was, join up the numbered dots from 1 to 40. Does it look like Slink the wolf? Now follow the dotted lines to see with which arrow Little Hiawatha hit the wolf. Was it the blue one?

Here are six of those lovely little Dalmatian puppies from the film 101 Dalmatians. Can you say which two have exactly the same spots? Answer: five and two puppies are the same.

If you take a soft pencil and shade-in all the dotted areas, you will see someone who was very kind to animals and always planting apple trees. Is it Johnny Appleseed and two friends?

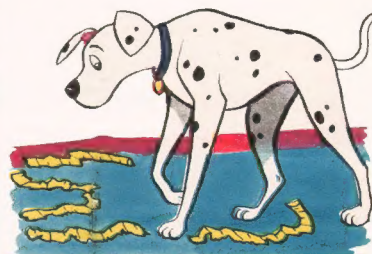

Cinderella's DISNEY TIME

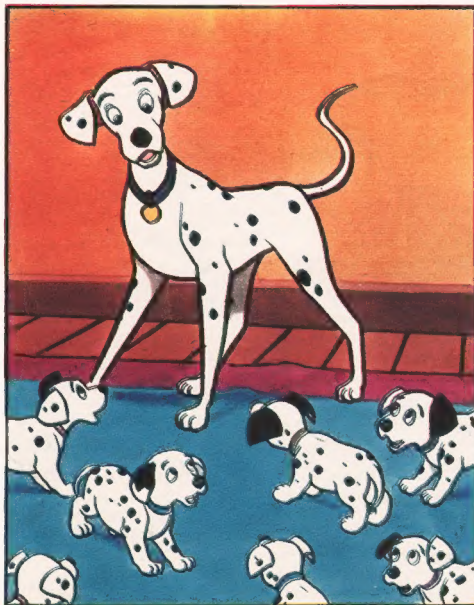

1. Hello, children. This is Cinderella with another story—this time it is about Perdita and all those playful Dalmatian puppies of hers. The pranks they get into are really fantastic!

2. Perdita has a hard job to stop those puppies getting into mischief, and one morning she was just too late to stop them playing with a tape measure that her mistress, Anita, had left on a chair.

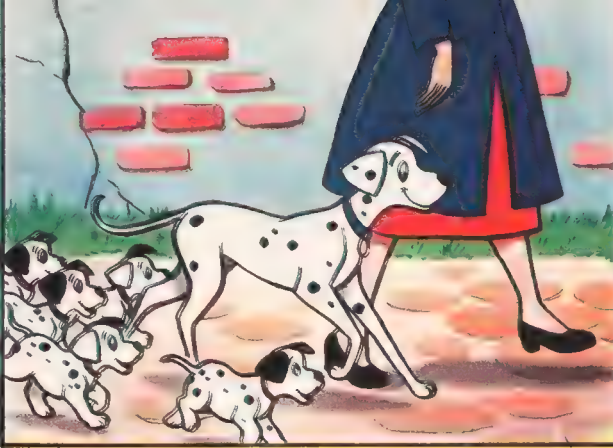

3. Anita had left the tape measure there because she wanted to measure the carpet. She was going to buy a new one. And now the puppies had torn the tape measure to pieces.

4. "What can be done," thought Perdita. "Now Anita has nothing to measure the carpet with." Then she scolded her puppies. "You really are very naughty," she said.

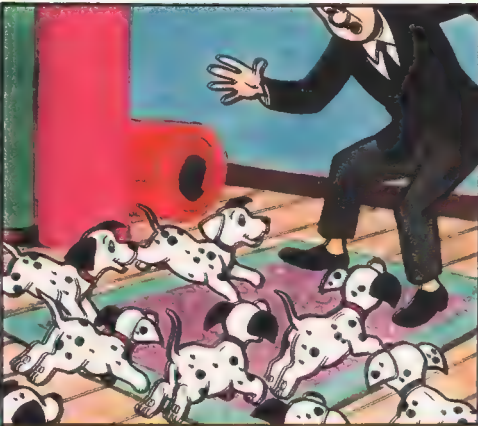

5. Then Perdita had an idea. She made the puppies stand side by side round the edge of the carpet, on two sides, so that Anita could see the carpet was just nine puppies long by six puppies wide.

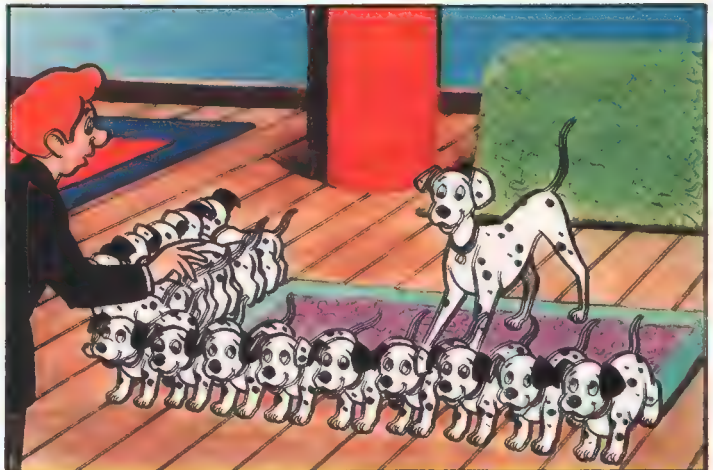

6. Wasn't that clever? Anita said it was and Perdita felt quite proud. Then Anita said Perdita and the puppies must go to the shop with her, and off they all went.

7. Outside the shop, Anita and Perdita and the puppies looked at the carpets in the window. Then Anita saw one she liked. "That will do beautifully," she said. "I do hope it is the right size. We'll go inside."

8. Inside the shop the salesman put the carpet Anita liked down on the floor. But he was surprised when Perdita barked at her puppies and they all ran over to the carpet.

9. The puppies stood round the edges of the carpet and—do you know?—it was just nine puppies long and six puppies wide!

10. Anita was so pleased and said she would take the carpet right away. So back home they all went and, as a special treat, Anita took them through the park so they could all have a good romp. They did have a jolly time.

11. Those puppies may be naughty, but Anita wouldn't be without them for anything. Did you like that story? I'll be back with another special tale for you to read before very long.

WALT DISNEY'S

Peter Pan

From the Walt Disney Motion Picture "Peter Pan"
based upon "Peter Pan" by Sir James Matthew Barrie

When they were a little bored at home and there was nothing very interesting to do, Wendy and her two brothers, Michael and John, loved to visit their friend Peter Pan in Never Never Land. This they were able to do with the help of Peter Pan's magic.

1. Wendy and her brothers, Michael and John, found Never Never Land a very exciting place, because Peter Pan always had something new to show them. One day he took them to the Indian camp, where they saw all the Indian braves putting on war paint. "We use war paint on our faces and bodies to scare our enemies," said Chief Big Panther to the children.

2. John and Michael thought that war paint was great fun, and they began to paint their own faces with it. When the Indians saw that the boys wanted to play, Tiger Lily put feathers on their heads and the chief went to get some toy bows and arrows from his wigwam.

3. John and Michael were soon having a fine time, playing at "Indians on the Warpath." "Ha, ha! When our enemies see our war paint, they're going to be so frightened," laughed John, as he and his little brother ran off through the jungle. Wendy and Peter were soon left far behind them.

4. The two boys ran into a clearing—and then found that they had run right into Captain Hook and two of his pirates! "Uh-oh. Now we've really found some enemies!" said frightened Michael. "Ha, ha! You certainly have!" laughed Captain Hook.

5. Captain Hook and his pirates didn't see Wendy and Peter, because the pirates were too busy capturing John and Michael. "War paint is no use against us!" laughed the pirate chief. "Seize them, men! We'll take them back to our ship as prisoners."

6. You'll never guess what Peter Pan did! He went to find Captain Hook's old enemy, the green crocodile, and took him over to the Indian camp. There he painted the green crocodile with brown war paint. Wendy and the Indians couldn't figure it out at all.

7. On the beach, Captain Hook and his pirates were taking their prisoners to their rowboat when a big crocodile appeared. "Don't be frightened by him," smiled Captain Hook. "This isn't the green crocodile, and it's only the green crocodile that I am frightened of."

8. The very next moment the croc rushed at Captain Hook and Captain Hook heard "Tick-tock! Tick-tock!" coming from inside it. "It is the green crocodile!" exclaimed Captain Hook. "Somebody must have painted the croc brown!" But we know who that "somebody" was, don't we?

9. Away ran the pirates with the crocodile chasing them, and Michael and John were able to join Wendy and Peter Pan. "Ha, ha!" laughed Peter. "Remember when Captain Hook said that he wasn't afraid of war paint? Well, he certainly is afraid of war paint now. Just look at him!"

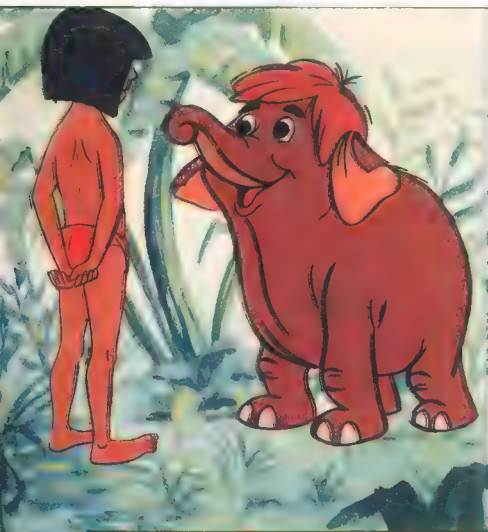

10. When it was all over and the pirates had gone back to their ship out in the bay, Wendy, Peter, Michael and John had lunch with Tiger Lily and Chief Big Panther. "We certainly enjoyed our game," said Michael. "And the war paint did frighten away our enemies, didn't it?"

NEW TALES from the JUNGLE BOOK

1. Look at what Mowgli is doing in this issue! He's playing with four baby wolf cubs. "What soft, warm, cuddly little things you are!" the jungle boy chuckled to them. And even Baloo the bear had to smile to see them jumping and playing.

2. As the wolf-cubs at last ran away, Colonel Hathi's son, the young elephant, came along. "I wish I had someone to play with," he said sadly. "But all the other elephants are much older than me." "I'll play with you," offered Mowgli at once. "And I'm sure Baloo will, as well."

3. "Will you really play with me?" said the little elephant in delight, and he jumped up at Mowgli in the same way that the wolf-cubs had been doing. But baby elephants are much bigger and heavier than baby wolves, and the jungle boy was knocked flat.

4. "Oh—I am sorry, Mowgli," said the young elephant, as the jungle boy climbed to his feet. "Never mind," called out Baloo, who had seated himself on the end of a log. "Come and play see-saw with me."

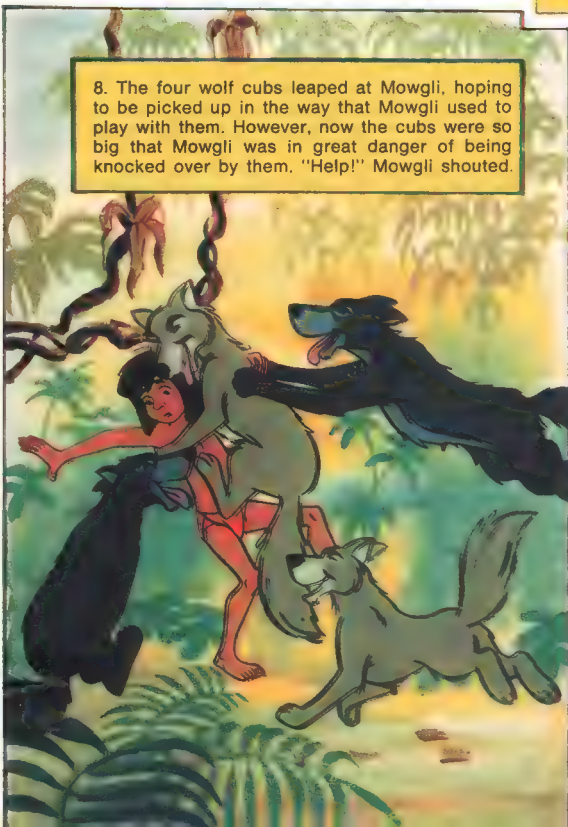

5. The little elephant was ever so pleased. But when he jumped on to the end of the log, Baloo was shot up into the air and Bonk! He hit his head against a branch of a tree.

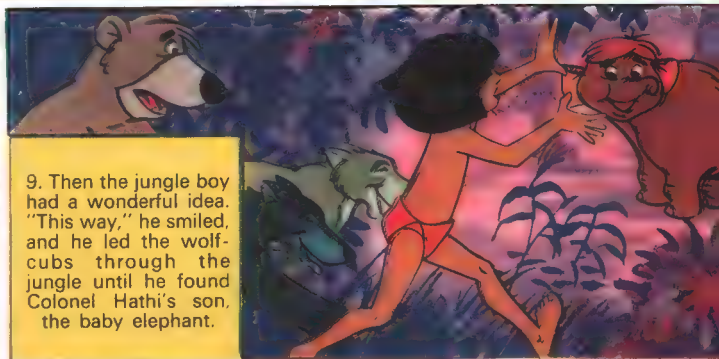

6. Sadly, the young elephant went off to join his father and the other elephants. "It's so difficult to find someone to play with when you're an elephant," he said to Mowgli and Baloo.

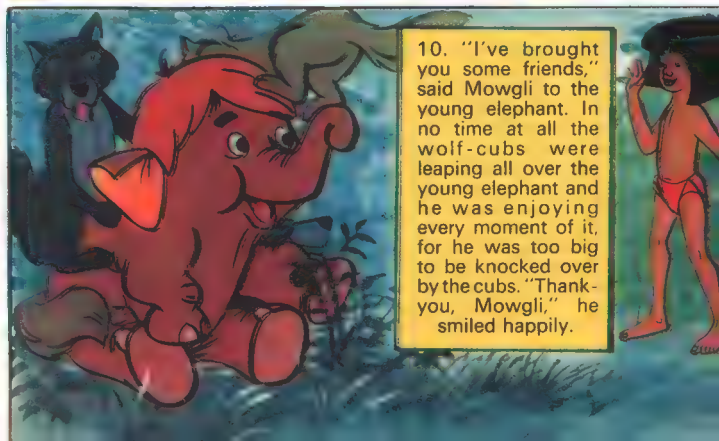

7. A few months later Mowgli and Baloo went back to see the wolf-cubs. The cubs were delighted to see the jungle boy. "But how you've grown!" exclaimed Mowgli. "You are almost as big as full-grown wolves!"

8. The four wolf cubs leaped at Mowgli, hoping to be picked up in the way that Mowgli used to play with them. However, now the cubs were so big that Mowgli was in great danger of being knocked over by them. "Help!" Mowgli shouted.

9. Then the jungle boy had a wonderful idea. "This way," he smiled, and he led the wolf-cubs through the jungle until he found Colonel Hathi's son, the baby elephant.

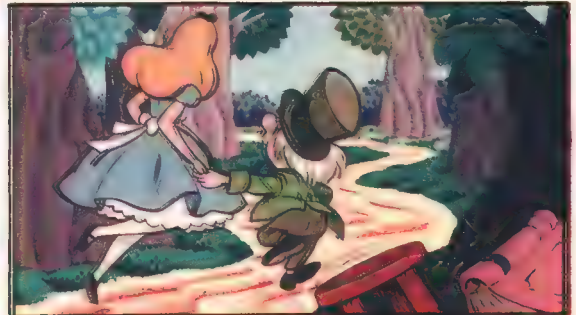

10. "I've brought you some friends," said Mowgli to the young elephant. In no time at all the wolf-cubs were leaping all over the young elephant and he was enjoying every moment of it, for he was too big to be knocked over by the cubs. "Thank-you, Mowgli," he smiled happily.

ALICE in WONDERLAND AGAIN

1. Alice had just met the Mad Hatter reading a book. "It's all about the purple Grubchuck Bird," he told her. "But there's no such thing as a Grubchuck Bird," Alice protested. The Mad Hatter just sniffed. "Of course there isn't, silly," he replied. "That's why all the pages are blank."

2. "Then I don't see much point in looking at them," Alice said. "It's rather silly." But just then the Mad Hatter threw his book to one side, grabbed Alice's hand, and rushed off down the road with her. "Come and see the Dodo," he cried. "Now there's a real bird for you!"

3. They arrived to see the Dodo bird flying above them. The March Hare was standing watching him. "Goodness gracious me, I didn't know the Dodo could fly!" cried Alice. "He can't really," said the Mad Hatter. "He's only just pretending to. He's clever like that!"

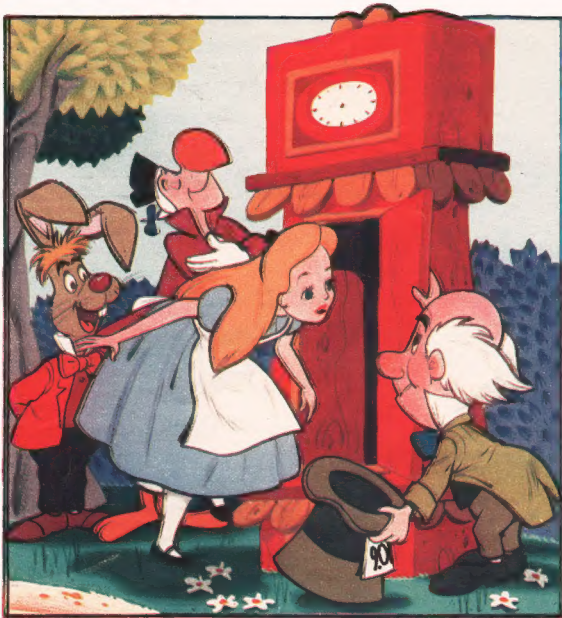

4. "I wish I could pretend like that," said Alice. "I'd be flying in no time at all." Then the Dodo flew down and the other two put her on his back.

5. "Goodness me, what are you two doing?" Alice cried. "If you want to fly in no time at all, then we must get some no-time-at-all," cried the Mad Hatter. "Hold on tight there!" and next moment they were all rushing off again, the Dodo carrying Alice.

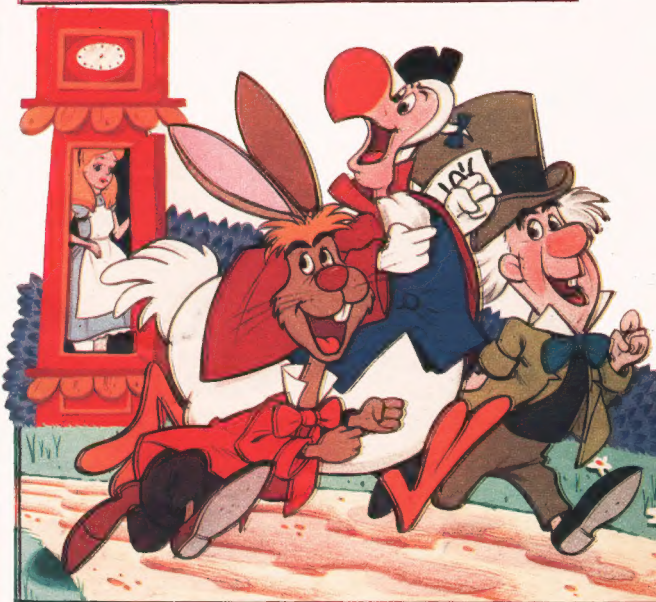

6. They stopped running when they had reached an old grandfather clock. "But there's no such thing as no-time-at-all!" Alice said. "That's all you know," laughed the March Hare. "Do you see that clock? It hasn't any hands, so of course it's no-time-at-all. Anyone can see that."

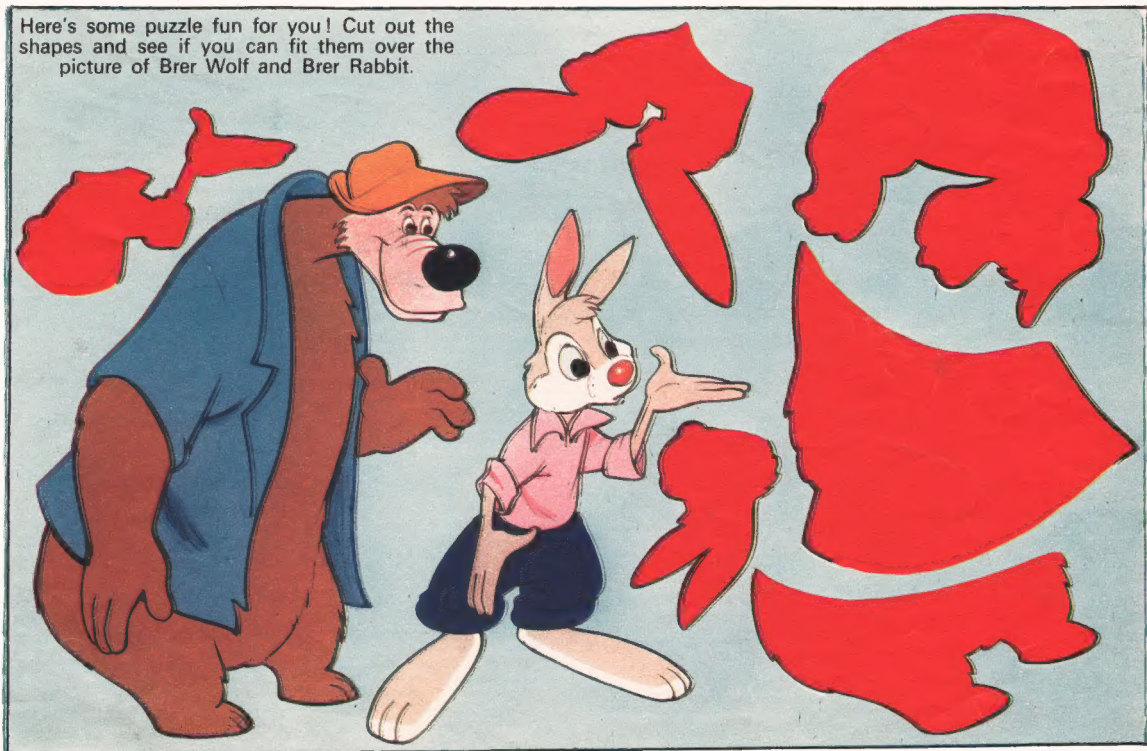

7. "But you said I could fly," said Alice. "I don't see how this old clock will help me do that!" "Oh, yes, it will," said the Mad Hatter. "Just step inside." And he opened the door. Alice could see that, as well as having no hands, the clock had no working parts either.

8. "Now what happens?" cried Alice, when she was inside. "Goodness, haven't you heard that time flies?" asked the Mad Hatter. "If you wait in there long enough, time is sure to fly. Have a good 'time'!" Poor Alice! She wondered if she would ever get used to Wonderland.

Here's some puzzle fun for you! Cut out the shapes and see if you can fit them over the picture of Brer Wolf and Brer Rabbit.

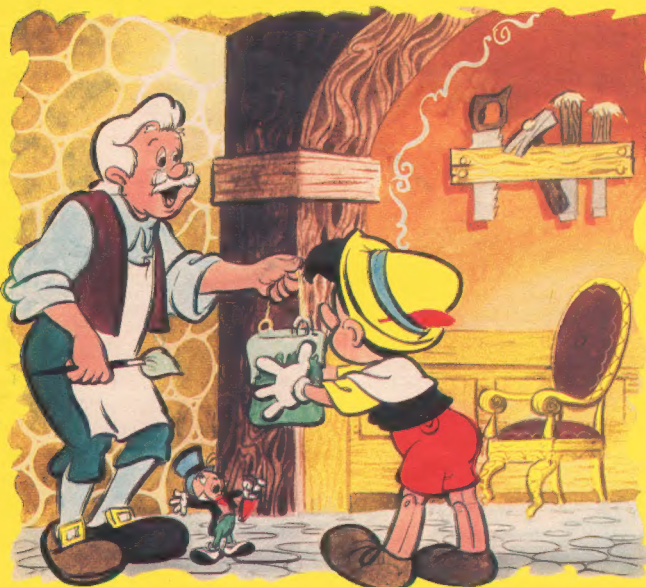

Adventures of PINOCCHIO

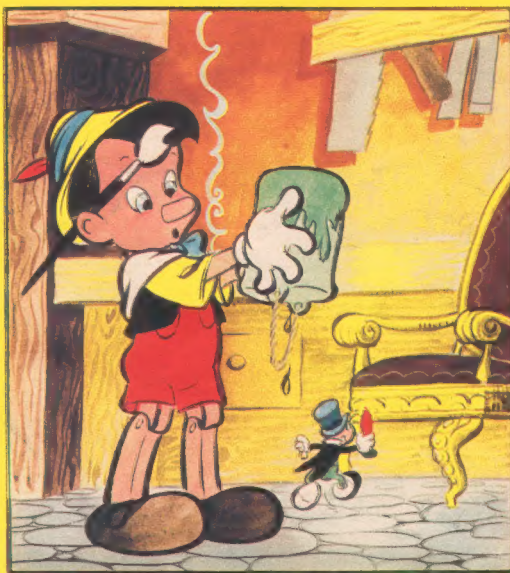

1. One day, old Geppetto the wood-carver was very busy in his workshop. He was varnishing an old chair to make it look bright and shiny. Pinocchio was playing with a ball, and when Jiminy Cricket noticed he told him to be careful.

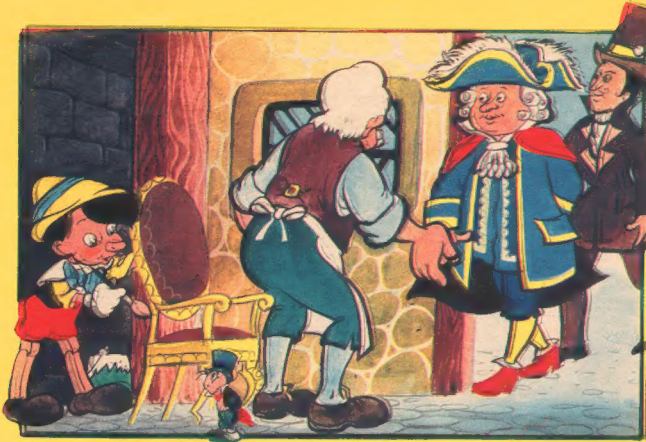

2. Next moment—it happened! Being a rather careless little wooden-boy, Pinocchio forgot he was in Geppetto's workshop and let the ball fly too close to the old wood-carver and—BOMP! It bounced on his head. "Stop playing, you naughty boy!" Jiminy told him. "Ask Geppetto if you can help him."

3. Well, when Pinocchio did as Jiminy had told him and asked Geppetto if he could help him, Geppetto replied: "Yes, you may. Here, take this can of varnish and the brush, and finish varnishing the chair for me. Be careful with it though, it belongs to the Duke de Dumpling. He's coming for it soon."

4. Pinocchio thought it was fun varnishing the chair . . . until he found the varnish-tin was empty! Then he noticed a similar tin on a shelf nearby, and helped himself to it. "This looks like varnish," he thought. "I'll use some of it."

5. When he brushed on some of the liquid from the second tin it looked like varnish. "Yes, this must be the right stuff," Pinocchio told himself. A little later, the rather plump Duke de Dumpling called to collect his varnished chair.

6. But, when the Duke put his hand on the chair he stuck to it! "What have you done to my chair?" he cried. Jiminy Cricket guessed the answer. "Silly boy!" he told Pinocchio. "You used GLUE!"

7. Geppetto went to the Duke's aid, and so did the Duke's servant, and Pinocchio. It really was a funny tug-o'-war! They pulled and pulled to free him.

8. Then at last—success! The Duke was freed. But next moment old Geppetto fell backwards on to the old chair and broke it into pieces! "Oh, dear!" said poor Geppetto. "I'm very sorry, Your Grace!"

9. But the Duke wasn't at all cross with Geppetto. You see, he was looking at a gleaming diamond-necklace which had just fallen from the torn seat of the chair. "Those jewels have been lost for years!"

10. From that moment, everybody was happy. The happy Duke de Dumpling made old Geppetto happy by giving him a handful of golden coins, and Pinocchio and Jiminy were happy, too. Wasn't it lucky Pinocchio used glue instead of varnish?

Darwination scans

McCoy edits